

Engineer from the French National Polytechnique School and PhD in Molecular and Cell Biology, Aude Sirven joined ANR at its creation to set up its programmes in biotechnology and to develop collaborations at a European and international level. She has acquired an extensive experience of the biotech sector at the European level and of the tech transfer issues.

Previous appointments include Scientific Attaché for the French Embassy in London and European project manager.